Nine to Testify Today In Probe of Teachers For Red Leanings

By the Associated Press

Nine witnesses were summoned today as the House Un-American Activities Committee continued a quest for evidence of Communist leanings among Philadelphia school teachers.

Robert L. Kunzig, committee counsel, named two of the nine as Bessie Stensky and Adeline Mahaney in connection with the examination of nine teacher-witnesses yesterday.

28 Teachers Quizzed.

The hearing yesterday, coupled with several sessions in Philadelphia last November, brought to 28 the number of teachers who have been quizzed about possible Red associations.

Of this number one, Dr. Wilbur Lee Mahaney, testified to participation in Communist activities in the past decade.

Dr. Mahaney, 51-year-old teacher of American history at West Philadelphia High School, told the committee yesterday he joined the Communist Party in its aims were not too different from the Roosevelt administration.

He quit in 1948, he went on, because "the political climate had changed" and his personal interests ran in a different direction.

Dr. Mahaney refused, however, to name for the committee any fellow Reds. "It's a matter of deep-seated conscience," he said, adding he was well aware he stood in jeopardy of being cited for contempt of Congress. He said that made no difference to him.

"In following my conscience, I don't intend to show any disrespect to this committee or any other branch of government," he said. "Without fear or hope of favor I will have to trust myself to the conscience of my fellow Americans."

Cite Fifth Amendment.

Dr. Mahaney's fellow witnesses during the day all cited the Fifth and other amendments to the Constitution to support their refusals to discuss possible Communist connections.

Most of them testified, however, they were not members of the Communist Party on the days on which they executed loyalty oaths required of Pennsylvania teachers in 1952.

Some declined to say whether they were Communist Party members on the day before they took the oath. One refused to say if he was a Communist Party member only a few hours before his oath was executed.

None would say, in reply to questions, if they served their Red connections for the oath-taking. Most of them relied on the Fifth Amendment's guarantee against self-incriminating testimony.
